WILSON SEES END OF PEACE MEETING

Preparing Formal Statement to American People.

MAKE KNOWN U. S. ATTITUDE

Secretary of War Garrison Sees Much Trouble Ahead and Is Worrying Lest Huerta's Troops Attack Americans at Vera Cruz Immediately on Expiration of Armistice.

Washington, June 20.—The Wilson administration is so convinced that the peace deliberations at Niagara Falls are rapidly nearing an end that the president is said to be preparing a formal statement to the American people which will set forth the administration's attitude. This report was not denied at the White House.

The administration likewise is prepared to resume its policy of watchful waiting until the situation simmers down. Both President Wilson and Secretary Bryan are optimistic. Not so with Secretary of War Garrison, however. He foresees a forward movement of Huerta's troops in preparation for an attack on the American forces now occupying Vera Cruz. It is known that the dictator is prepared to send a force of from 17,000 to 20,000 troops against the American forces. It is feared that an attack will be made immediately on the expiration of the armistice.

Minister Naon of Argentina, member of the Niagara Falls mediation board, quietly slipped into Washington. After a conference he sent a message to the other mediators, who at once went into secret session. The contents of the message were closely guarded, and no inkling was given out.

Secretary Bryan conferred with President Wilson on the Mexican situation for more than an hour, and then talked with Justice Lamar, one of the American delegates at Niagara Falls, over the special long distance telephone wire. Later he announced that the full scheduled conference of the mediators and delegates had been postponed owing to the failure of Minister Naon to arrive at Niagara Falls on time.

Secretary Bryan also made it known that Senor Naon has been in Washington since he left Niagara Falls for his visit to Yale and Harvard, but said he did not know what brought him here. It is thought, however, that the mediator journeyed to Washington to confer with the Spanish ambassador, who is representing Huerta's government in Washington.

President Wilson will tell about what he hoped to accomplish through mediation, will fix the responsibility for the breakdown and, it is understood, will declare that the United States has no desire to intervene in Mexico and will not do so unless forced to take action by some overt act.

The statement that the president would issue such a proclamation to the country and the world is an indication that there is no hope retained in the Niagara Falls proceedings.

Stands on Statement.

President Wilson stands squarely on the statement given out at Niagara Falls by the American delegates and will accept no settlement of the Mexican problem which is not based on the principles outlined by him. This was made clear by officials after the president had a conference with Secretary Bryan.

The president has no plans for going before congress with any phase of the Mexican question, and all talk of further armed intervention is groundless at the present time, according to officials in close touch with the situation. The same, they say, may be said of reports that the United States plans to recognize General Carranza, General Villa or any other faction in Mexico.

APOLOGIES IN WRECK INQUIRY

Lawyer Denies He Inferred Attempt to Spirit Away Witness.

Quebec, June 20.—The Empress of Ireland wreck inquiry opened with explanations and apologies by C. S. Haight, of counsel for the owners of the collier Storstad, which sank the liner, who said that he had not meant to imply that the Canadian-Pacific railway, owner of the Empress, had tried to spirit witnesses away.

This was the impression made by Mr. Haight when he placed on the stand James Galway, a quartermaster of the Empress of Ireland, who testified that the ship's steering gear was defective. Galway had told him, he said, that he was about to be sent to England.

MUNICIPAL HOME RULE

League Will Demand Right of Self-Government for Towns.

The Municipal Home Rule league was formed at Harrisburg this week by representatives of 54 municipalities and resolutions adopted against certain portions of the public service company law giving the public service commission control over utilities in municipalities. Plans were also made to start an agitation for the repeal of these sections, which it is contended take from municipalities the right to contract with public service companies within their borders and interfere with competition.

David L. Starr, of Bellevue, Allegheny county, was elected chairman; George F. P. Langfitt, of the same borough, secretary, and R. A. Holmes Lanaford, treasurer. The speakers included John W. West, Avalon, Allegheny county; Ira W. Stratton, Reading; W. R. Peoples, Jersey Shore Harry Calhoun, New Brighton; R. A. McCullough, Kittanning; William W. Hall, Pittston; Horace W. Davis, Sharon, and W. L. Pace, Wilkes-Barre

Arrangements were made to raise a fund of $5000, and for committees on finance, legislation and campaign. It was stated that letters from 100 municipalities, not represented, but pledging support had been received.

SETTLE MINERS STRIKE

Men in Kanawha Coal Fields Agree to Resume Work.

An agreement that will end the strike of about 5000 men in the Kanawha coal fields of West Virginia, was reached Thursday when representatives of the operators and mine workers accepted propositions offered the conciliators appointed by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

The principal demand of the men was for the adoption of the "ckeck-off" system, by which their union dues will be deducted from their pay envelopes each month by the companies and to this the representatives of the Kanawha Coal Operators' association agreed, with the understanding that not more than $1.10 is to be taken from each man's envelope per month.

LEWIS AND PINCHOT WILL JOIN FORCES

Two Washington Candidates Will Tour State Together

Philadelphia, June 20:—William Draper Lewis, Washington party candidate for governor, announced here Friday that he would formally open his campaign by accompanying Gifford Pinchot on his tour of the northeastern section of the state next week Pinchot and Lewis will visit Bradford, Wayne and Susquehanna counties.

They will travel by automobile, making addresses at the principal towns and ending with night meetings in the larger centers.

The tour will start June 25 and continue for three days. June 29 both candidates will go to Pittsburg, where they will meet Col. Roosevelt and other Progressives at the second Progressive conference in this state.

Lewis intends to spend the summer campaigning through the state and will aim to speak in every county seat.

During July and part of August Pinchot expects to visit the coal fields and the western part of the state. A. Nevin Detrich, state chairman of the Washington party, is at present in the north-eastern counties arranging for the Pinchot-Lewis tour.

Washington party candidates in the various sections visited will join Pinchot and Lewis and accompany them through the districts.

LOCK HAVEN NORMAL

Local Students Who Passed the State Examination.

Among the senior and junior students of the state normal school at Lock Haven who successfully passed the state board examinations this week were the following from this county:

Seniors—Leland Edinger, Luthersburg; Mary Gallagher, Curwensville.

Juniors—Mabel Albert, Woodland; Zoe Lines, Luthersburg; Bess Moore DuBois; Patricia Murphy, DuBois; Alta Rowles, Clearfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Miller, son George and daughters Nancy and Julia, returned from Northumberland, where they had been visiting, last evening.

VICTORY EXULTS SUFFRAGETTES

Rejoicing Follows Announcement of Conference.

ASQUITH TO MEET FURIES.

Sylvia Pankhurst's Starving on Steps of Parliament Forces Him to Receive Delegation — Arsonette Squad Fires Another Church—First Victory For the Wild Women.

London, June 20.—Although in a state of collapse, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst began the selection of the east side working women who will have audience with Premier Asquith. Elation from the premier's capitulation was not sufficient to offset the weakness caused by her eight days' hunger strike and her trip to the house of commons after her release from jail.

While the suffragettes were exulting at their victory, hailed as a big step toward votes for women, an attempt to burn a church at Beckenham, a suburb of London, was made by an "arson squad" of militant suffragettes.

The flames were extinguished. The damage done was very small.

The government is attempting to take the sting out of the victory of Miss Pankhurst, but the feeling is general that the surrender is complete. Miss Pankhurst was arrested for attempting to lead a delegation such as will be heard and declared she would remain on hunger strike until audience was granted.

Liberals Offer Excuses.

The fact that she kept her promise overshadows the statement issued by the chief Liberal whip that the audience had been agreed to hours before she was released from jail.

The fact is prominent in the public mind that the announcement of the audience was not made until Miss Pankhurst had taken her place, propped up with pillows, on the steps of the house of parliament.

She lay on the steps fully ten minutes before the announcement was made that the premier would receive a delegation of east side working women. Then she was taken to her home and suffered a severe relapse.

The surrender of Asquith has caused a great change in the feeling toward suffragettes. The demonstration which started when Miss Pankhurst was driven away from the commons continued to greet all suffragette speakers during the evening.

Numerous speakers were shown more respect than ever before all over London.

NEW CATHEDRAL

Local Masons Take Part in Dedication of Fine Building.

The new Masonic cathedral at Coudersport, Potter county, was dedicated this week, a large number of prominent Masons from all over the state being present to witness the ceremonies. It was also the occasion of the 31st reunion of the Ancient Accepted Scottish rite body. The following Masons are mentioned among those on the visitation and relief committee: Prof. George E. Zerfoss, of Clearfield; Daniel Pratt, DuBois. Prof Zerfoss was a former resident of Coudersport. E. T. Henry, of Clearfield, was given a degree at the session of the lodge.

The new cathedral is a handsome structure.

EARLY MORNING WEDDING

Italian Young People Married in St. Francis Church.

Carmelo Barba and Anna Cardinale were married at Nuptial Mass, in the St. Francis church, at 7.30 this morning. The ceremony was performed by Father Ryan. They were attended by Frank Crasain and Venzuela Barba.

The beautiful bride was attired in a satin gown and wore a vil of silk chiffon. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Won First Prize.

Michael Minehan returned yesterday from St. Bonaventure college, in Allegheny, N. Y. He carried off first prize in English versification, receiving $15 in gold and was distinguished in five of his classes. He graduated from St. Francis High school in 1912.

BROTHERHOODS FRATERNIZE

Clearfield Body Pays a Visit to Curwensville Organization

MOST DELIGHTFUL OCCASION

The Men Enjoy Short Speeches, Listen to Vocal and Instrumental Music, Partake of Fine Refreshments and Vote the Meeting Best They Have Yet Held.

Friday evening almost one hundred men from Clearfield Brotherhoods went to Curwensville to visit the Brotherhood there. The men left on the B., R. & P. train which leaves Clearfield shortly after 7 o'clock, and returned on a special train leaving Curwensville at 11.00 P. M.

The affair marks a milestone in the history of the two organizations, and was characterized by one speaker, who has been 46 years a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as the most remarkable gathering of this kind he had ever seen. Many of the town's most influential business and professional men were members of the visiting party, and at Curwensville the men of all churches welcomed the visitors.

An Imposing Procession.

Arriving at Curwensville, the Clearfield men, led by the Keystone band, marched through town, followed by the men of the Curwensville Brotherhood. The exercises were held in the Methodist Episcopal church, beginning at 8.00 o'clock. The large auditorium was almost filled with men, several ministers of the two towns being present.

Following an organ prelude and singing by the congregation, the Rev. Dr. Bender, of Trinity, made the invocation. This was followed by a selection from the orchestra.

The address of welcome was made by T. G. Shelow, president of the Curwensville Brotherhood. Mr. Shelow told of what constitutes a real man and extended to the visitors a cordial welcome. The response was made by William T. Boyce, who introduced A. G. Woodward, Esq. Mr. Woodward made a characteristically able address, referring to the responsibilities as well as the advantages in being banded together in a Brotherhood.

Several Speeches.

The Curwensville quartet rendered a selection, after which Joseph E. Phillips spoke of "Our Brotherhood," telling about the workings of the Clearfield organization. John A. Dale, speaking for the Curwensville organization, made an excellent address. This was followed by two selections from the Clearfield quartet.

The men then went to the church basement, where an elaborate spread of good things was served. As a climax to a splendid program, the feast left little to be desired. Each person was provided with a tray bearing sandwiches, pickles and coffee, after which liberal helpings of ice cream, the dishes heaped high with strawberries, and cake of every good variety, that eloquently attested to the culinary abilities of the Curwensville ladies, completed the repast.

The speechmaking was limited, as the hour of departure was drawing near when the banquet was brought to a close and the Clearfield quartet, assisted by Ellis Schomo, rendered a selection. A. G. Woodward, of Curwensville, was toastmaster and called upon Harry B. Powell, of Clearfield, C. S. Russell, of Curwensville, Hon. Frank G. Harris, Rev. E. V. Brown, Rev. B. A. Salter and Dr. Bender.

An Enjoyable Affair.

In introducing Mr. Harris, reference was made to his travels, Mr. Woodward recently having heard an address by Mr. Harris on his trip to the Holy Land. Mr. Harris regretted his inability to present anything worthy of the occasion in the few minutes allotted to him, and upon motion of Rev. Lantz, Mr. Harris was extended an invitation to give an address to the Brotherhood at their meeting on Sunday, June 28, at 3.00 o'clock. The motion was adopted by a rising vote, Mr. Harris accepting the invitation.

Dr. Bender was introduced by Rev. Lantz and made the hit of the evening by explaining the peculiarities of an "Italian" watch, after which the men adjourned to the train.

Altogether, the affair was one of the most enjoyable ever participated in by the men of Clearfield.

ANCIENT COUNTRIES WILL BE VISITED

Miss Sarah Cummings Will Take Second Voyage Abroad

Miss Sara Cummings will sail for Europe, June 24, upon the S. S. Oceania, Austro-American, with the Syracuse University party, originated and personally directed by Alexander Clarence Flick, Litt D. Ph. D., professor of European history at the Syracuse university. They will land in Patras, Greece, July 10.

They will spend several days in Greece, visiting Delphi, the religious center of ancient Greece, Olympia, Cornith, Mycanai, Nauphi aandAthens the cultural center of the ancient world. From there they will sail for Alexandria.

While in Egypt Miss Cummings will visit Cairo, Memphis, Heliopolis, Old Cairo, the Sphinx, the Pyramids, mosques, the Petrified Forest and the museums.

A special trip up the Nile to Luxor and Karnak will be arranged. She will visit the beautiful valley of the Nile during the season when the inundation is taking place, when the water slowly rises until it reaches the same heights which it has been attaining for ages; in three months, then slowly starts to fall again. The party will return to New York September 2.

Miss Cummings is a teacher of rarest ability and genius. Her pupils accomplish more work than any others in the school, and they do it because they love to. They study history and learn its real value; that it is not a dry data of facts, but a narration of real things done by real live people, who lived, walked and talked as we do, and of their significance to us.

Miss Cummings is that most ideal of all women, a spiritual mother. She takes a deep personal interest and love in the boys and girls who come to her. She leads them to build ideals of purer, grander lives than they have ever dreamed of before. She instills in the hearts of all who know her the love of their fellow men and the value of being a leader, not a mere follower in the mass. This is her second trip to Europe. On the former trip, made in 1910, she visited England, France, Switzerland, Italy and Greece, returning by the way of Quebec, Canada.

He Paid the Bill.

A horse belonging to Rev. A. L. Frank, of Mahaffey, got out of the stable Monday night and entered a cornfield belonging to Constable Redden, of that place. The constable charged that the animal had done $4 worth of damages to his corn, and the minister settled.

Graduated from Bucknell.

Miss Mildred Ruth Kirk, of Clearfield graduated from the Bucknell university as an A. B., at the commencement this week.

BROUGHT [illegible] TO THE [illegible]

Members of W. C. T. U. [illegible] County Home Friday

FLOWERS AND FRUIT [illegible]

Family of Unfortunates Made Happy by Kindness of [illegible] Song Delight Them—Rev. [illegible] Delivers a Temperance Talk in Very Pleasing Custom.

The W. C. T. U. of Clearfield observed the anniversary of [illegible] day of Miss Jennie Cassiday [illegible] by making it cheer up day for [illegible] mates of the County Home. Miss Jennie Cassiday was 85 years old and confined to her bed in [illegible] ville, Kentucky, and worked [illegible] idea of sending bouquets of flowers with a text from the Bible [illegible] to them, to all invalids. Miss [illegible] Willard met her and appointed superintendent of Flower Mission. Since her death the W. C. T. U. celebrates her birthday by making [illegible] upon that day people less fortunate than others.

Twenty-seven of the members of the Clearfield W. C. T. U. went on the 1.15 train and spent the afternoon at the home. A very delightful program was given in the chapel and the joy in the faces of the inmates gathered there showed how greatly they appreciated the efforts made to entertain them.

A Pleasant Occasion.

All joined in the singing of the opening hymn, then Rev. B. A. Salter led in prayer. This was followed by a few very impressive words by Mrs. G. Bouton, and some of the men and women told how glad they were to have W. C. T. U. day come and how they looked forward to it each year.

Miss Frances Haichbold recited in a very pleasing and taking manner eight or nine amusing poems and was heartily applauded by the audience. She ended by giving a poem of her own composition, "Miss Hagan goes to the Picture Show," which brought a hearty laugh from all.

A Temperance Talk.

After two more songs in which the inmates joined enthusiastically, Miss Salter addressed the inmates. She said:

"I was greatly surprised when I first learned that the work of ridding the land of the liquor traffic was one all that the W. C. T. U. undertook. As I had though that was a great enough work in itself, but I learned that the union carry the gospel to the jails, cheer the lonely and forsaken and do what-so-ever they can find that needs doing.

"To refuse license is not to refuse personal liberty or personal privilege, because no man liveth unto himself. 'Am I my brother's keeper?' is a question that has come down to us through the ages. Every man is his brother's keeper. We cannot live and not influence others. Every man lives for another.

"In a town in which I once lived 16 out of 17 licenses were refused and the town improved because of it. The money that formerly went for liquor now buys shoes.

"With God's help any man can give up the drink habit. There is no man living who does not love his children well enough to give liquor up, if he only has faith enough to do so. I hope that each of you here will be a strong advocate for state-wide prohibition and do all that you can to help the cause."

Miss Laura Hoyt sang a delightful solo and it was very appreciatively received by the audience. It was easy to see that she was a favorite at the home.

Gifts for the Inmates.

Mrs. Carrie Smith and Miss Laura Hoyt then sang a beautiful duet, while the ladies distributed flowers, magazines, fruit and candy to each of the 139 inmates. The beautiful roses brought great joy to the poor, unfortunates, who carried them around and disposed of them in whatever way they could most cherish them. Especially in the hospital wards they brought great cheer and almost pathetic gratitude into the faces of the recipents.

The ladies returned upon the six o'clock train. The County Home offers a wonderful opportunity for people with spare time to use in giving pleasure to others. These people, human beings, less fortunate than others, certainly appreciate all efforts to make life more pleasant for them.

WHAT?

What has become of the man who never saw a cooler summer than the present one?

Good evening! Remember the Lord's day and keep it wholly free from joy rides and other abominations.

THE JUNE BRIDE.

Always the June bride regards herself as more fortunate than the bride of any other month of the year. To be married in June is the ambition of most girls, but unfortunately all of them cannot carry out their plans. But there are more marriages in June than in any other month, and the June bride always looks as happy as she feels. She has a right to all the happiness that comes her way, for winter is coming and the frosts will be on the pumpkin and the honeymoon.

A girl ought to begin thinking of her June wedding about the first of July of the previous year. That is, the young girl who does not profit by the experience of her female friends. It might be possible for a young girl who thinks of rushing into matrimony before she has learned to do up her own hair to escape matrimonial troubles if she were to begin dreaming of a June wedding when she is sixteen and keep on dreaming til she is old enough to distinguish between a meat chopper and a nutmeg grater.

The divorce courts are kept busy with cases in which the principals married while they were entirely too young, before they had gained that intelligens which warns human beings not to rush in where angels fear to tread. Children who marry without knowing what they are doing find the matrimonial highways strewn with all kinds of trouble, whether they were married in June or any other month. But here's hoping that the June brides of this year will all prove to their own satisfaction that matrimony is the only road to happiness.

THE INDUSTRIAL PARADE.

Undoubtedly the industrial parade which will form part of the two-day celebration of the Fourth of July in Clearfield will be a success, whatever may happen to other features of the event. The committee which has the industrial parade in charge has already enlisted the interest and cooperation of a large number of manufacturers and business men in the forthcoming pageant, and within a week it is expected that the list of those who will be represented in the parade by floats and wagons will contain the name of every manufacturer and business man in Clearfield.

Having taken up this project it would be a serious reflection upon the enterprise of the business men of the town if they were not to put forth every effort to make the industrial parade the success it is expected to be. The floats should not only be numerous, but they should be truly representative of the progressiveness of the citizens of the town. There will be many strangers in Clearfield on the Fourth, and these should be given an opportunity to see and judge of the town's enterprise through the floats in the industrial parade.

If GeneralFunston's troops shall be massacred by Mexicans while Bryan's mediators are drinking champagne in Niagara Falls there will be a day of reckoning for the secretary of state.

He who never says anything never makes any mistakes in his speech, but such a man is about as useful as a comb to bald headed man.

It has been so long since it rained in this section that the people are to be excused for being without an umbrella when it is wet.

Stand up for your town, even if you are knocked down for it.

Join in the industrial parade on the Fourth.

GOLDEN EAGLE NIGHT AT BIG TABERNACLE

Evangelist Johnson Preaches Strong Sermons

Osceola Mills, June 20.

Golden Eagle night was a grand success in Osceola Mills Thursday night. The largest crowd that has yet attended the meetings filled the large tabernacle, and people were standing outside. A special train brought the visiting lodge of Eagles to Osceola, where, led by the Osceola band, they marched around town and then to the tabernacle, where seats had been reserved. About 175 men represented the Golden Eagles.

The opening service of praise was greatly enjoyed by every one. The large chorus choir sang several numbers, which were greatly appreciated. The "Cross Key's" Glee club sang two numbers. Every one was very glad to hear these gentlemen and eagerly await their return. Richard Blankley, a former Osceola resident sang the "Holy City." No one that heard Mr. Blankley but felt better for it. Mr. Mainwaring played for the second time "The Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore." Mr. Mainwaring certainly holds his audience from the time he starts until the "Finale."

Mr. Johnson then read the announcements for the remainder of the week. Then, after a plea for God's guidance, he announced his subject, "The Importance of Working for Jesus Christ." In that magnificent idea for Christian people to go out and do their full duty he made his audience feel their first duty was to work for Christ. "The first thing you need in working for Christ is the Word of God. I would prefer to go without the Faith if I had the Word of God as my guide. Another thing we need is Faith in God's promises. God has promised to save a man, no matter how wicked he may be A third thing we need in working for Jesus is to have courage even if you think that some one will laugh at you have the courage to do right. For I say this to night, and never forget it that a man can laugh you into hell, but he can never laugh you out of hell If you forget every thing else that I say tonight, do not forget that. If we do our duty, God never tells us to go any place but Jesus goes before us, and very often prepares the way God will always go with you when He calls you to go some place for Him When we go in the name of the Lord our God He will go with us and help us It is God that must work through us, not we ourselves God is looking for Gideonites in Osceola Mills He is looking for men and women who will not blow retreat

"It is an awful thing for a soul to go out of this world without God and without hope. May God help us tonight and get hold of our hearts that we may make up our minds that we will go anywhere and try to win precious ones to Christ God help us to go out to slay the lion of sin."

The meeting was closed by everyone standing and singing that splendid old hymn, "Stand Up For Jesus."

Mr. Johnson will speak to men only Sunday afternoon at 3 P. M subject, "Men's Sins, Diseases and Habits." Mrs. Johnson will address the women at the Presbyterian church at the same hour.

STATED ADDITIONS TO SURPLUS

For thirty-five years, at the declaration of each dividend, an addition to the Surplus has been made and the practice of thus strengthening the bank is still regularly followed. The results of this policy, noted below, are its own best commentary.

Author of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm"

Meantime Feeble Phoebe Day was driving her father's horse up to the hills to bring Cephas Cole home. It was a thrilling moment, a sort of outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual tie, for their banns were to be published the next day.

It had been an eventful autumn for Cephas. After a third request for the hand of Miss Patience Baxter and a refusal of even more than common decision and energy, Cephas turned about face and employed the entire month of September in a determined assault upon the affections of Miss Lucy Morrill, but with no better avail.

Cephas' belief in the holy state of matrimony as being the only one proper for a man really ought to have commended him to the opposite (and unfaithful) sex more than it did, and Lucy Morrill held as respectful an opinion of the institution and its manifold advantages as Cephas himself, but she was in a very unsettled frame of mind and not at all susceptible to wooing. She had a strong preference for Philip Perry and held an opinion, not altogether unfounded in human experience, that in course of time, when quite deserted by Patty Baxter, his heart might possibly be caught on the rebound. It was only a chance, but Lucy would almost have preferred remaining unmarried even to the withering age of twenty-five rather than not be at liberty to accept Philip Perry in case she should be asked.

Cephas, therefore, by the middle of October could be picturesquely and alliteratively described as being raw from repeated rejections. His bruised heart and his despised oil literally cried out for the appreciation so long and blindly withheld. Now all at once Phoebe disclosed a second virtue, her first and only one hitherto in the eyes of Cephas having been an ability to get on with his mother—a feat in which many had made an effort and few indeed had succeeded. Phoebe, it seems, had always secretly admired, respected and loved Cephas Cole. Never since her pale and somewhat glassy blue eye had opened on life had she beheld a being she could so adore if encouraged in the attitude.

The moment this unusual and unexpected poultice was really applied to Cephas' wounds they began to heal. In the course of a month the most ordinary observer could have perceived a physical change in him. He cringed no more, but held his head higher; his back straightened; his voice developed a gruff, assertive note like that of a stern Roman father; he let his mustache grow and sometimes, in his most reckless moments, twiddled the end of it.

And then congratulations began to pour in. Was ever marriage so fortuitous? The Co'es' farm joined that of the Days', and the union between the two only children would cement the friendship between the families. The fact that Uncle Bart was a joiner, Cephas a painter and Abel Day a mason and bricklayer made the alliance almost providential in its business opportunities. Phoebe's Massachusetts aunt sent a complete outfit of gilt edged china, a clock and a mahogany chamber set. Aunt Abby relinquished to the young couple a bedroom and a spare chamber in the "main part," while the Days supplied live geese feathers and table and bed linen with positive prodigality. Aunt Abby trod the air like one inspired.

"If only I could 'a' looked ahead," smiled Uncle Bart quizzically to himself, "I'd 'a' had thirteen sons and daughters an' married off one of 'em every year. That would 'a' made Abby's good temper kind o' permanent."

Cephas was content too. There was a good deal in being settled and having "the whole doggoned business" off your hands. Phoebe looked a very different creature to him in these latter days. Her eyes were just as pale, of course, but they were brighter, and they radiated love for him, an expression in the female eye that he had thus far been singularly unfortunate in securing. She still held her mouth slightly open, but Cephas thought that it might be permissible, perhaps after three months of wedded bliss, to request her to be more careful in closing it.

Cephas did not think of Patty any longer with bitterness in these days, being of the opinion that she was punished enough in observing his own growing popularity and prosperity.

"If she should see that mahogany chamber set going into the ell I guess she'll be glad enough to change her mind," thought Cephas exultingly, and then there suddenly shot through his mind the passing fancy, "I wonder if she would!" He promptly banished the infamous suggestion, however, reenforcing his virtue with the reflection that the chamber set was Phoebe's anyway, and the marriage day appointed and the invitations given out and the wedding cake being baked, a loaf at a time, by his mother and Mrs. Day.

As a matter of fact, Patty would have had no eyes for Phoebe's magnificent mahogany, even had the cart that carried it passed her on the hill where she and Mark Wilson were walking. Her promise to marry him was a few weeks old now, and his arm encircled her slender waist under the brown homespun cape. That in itself was a new sensation and gave her the delicious sense of belonging to somebody who valued her highly and assured her of his sentiments clearly and frequently, both by word and deed. Life, dull gray life, was going to change its hue for her presently, and not long after, she hoped, for Waitstill too.

The "publishing" of Cephas and his third choice, their dull walk up the aisle of the meeting house before an admiring throng on the Sunday when Phoebe would "appear bride," all this seemed very tame as compared with the dreams of this ardent and adventurous pair of lovers who had gone about for days harboring secrets greater and more daring, they thought, than had ever been breathed before within the hearing of Saco water.

CHAPTER XXI.

Love's Young Dream.

It was not an afternoon for day dreams, for there was a chill in the air and a gray sky. Only a week before the hills along the river might have been the walls of the New Jerusalem, shining like red gold. Now the glory had departed, and it was a naked world, with empty nests hanging to boughs that not long ago had been green with summer.

Young love thought little of nature's miracles, and hearts that beat high and fast were warm enough to forget the bleak wind and gathering clouds. If there were naked trees were there not full barrels of apples in every cellar? If there was nothing but stubble in the frozen fields, why there was plenty of wheat and corn at the mill all ready for grinding. The cold air made one long for a cheery home and fireside, the crackle of a hearth log, the bubbling of a steaming kettle, and Patty and Mark clung together as they walked along, making bright images of a life together, snug, warm and happy.

Patty was a capricious creature, but all her changes were sudden and endearing ones, captivating those who loved her more than a monotonous and unchanging virtue. Any little shower with Patty always ended with a rainbow, that made the landscape more enchanting than before. Of late her little coquetries and petulances had disappeared as if by magic. She had been melted somehow from irresponsible girlhood into womanhood and that, too, by the ardent affection of a very ordinary young man who had no great gift save that of loving Patty greatly. The love had served its purpose in another way, too, for under its influence Mark's own manhood had broadened and deepened. He longed to bind Patty to him for good and all, to capture the bright bird whose fluttering wings and burnished plumage so captured his senses and stirred his heart, but his longings had changed with the quality of his love, and he glowed at the thought of delivering the girl from her dreary surroundings and giving her the tenderness, the ease and comfort, the innocent gayety, that her nature craved.

"You won't fail me, Patty darling?" he was saying at this moment. "Now that our plans are finally made, with never a weak point anywhere as far as I can see, my heart is so set upon carrying them out that every hour of waiting seems an age!"

"No, I won't fail, Mark, but I never know the day that father will go to town until the night before. I can always hear him making his preparations in the barn and the shed, and ordering Waitstill here and there. He is as excited as if he was going to Boston instead of Milltown."

"The night before will do. I will watch the house every evening till you hang a white signal from your window."

"It won't be white," said Patty, who would be mischievous on her deathbed. "My Sunday go-to-meetin' petticoat is too grand, and everything else that we have is yellow."

"I shall see it, whatever color it is you can be sure of that!" said Mark gallantly. "Then it's decided that next morning I'll wait at the tavern from sunrise, and whenever your father and Waitstill have driven up Saco hill I'll come and pick you up, and we'll be off like a streak of lightning across the hills to New Hampshire. How lucky that Riverboro is only thirty miles from the state line! It looks like snow, and how I wish it would be something more than a flurry, a regular whizzing, whirring storm that would pack the roads and let us slip over them with our sleigh bells ringing!"

"I should like that, for they would be our only wedding bells. Oh, Mark! What if Waitstill shouldn't go, after all, though I heard father tell her that he needed her to buy things for the store, and that they wouldn't be back till after nightfall. Just to think of being married without Waitstill!"

"You can do without Waitstill on this one occasion, better than you can without me," laughed Mark, pinching Patty's cheek. "I've given the town clerk due notice and I have a friend to meet me at his office. He is going to lend me his horse for the drive home, and we shall change back the next week. That will give us a fresh horse each way and we'll fly like the wind, snow or no snow. When we come down Guide Board hill that night, Patty, we shall be man and wife; isn't that wonderful?"

"We shall be man and wife in New Hampshire, but not in Maine, you say," Patty reminded him dolefully. "It does seem dreadful that we can't be married in our own state and have to go dangling about with this secret on our minds day and night, but it can't be helped. You'll try not to even think of me as your wife till we go to Portsmouth to live, won't you?"

"You're asking too much when you say I'll not to think of you as my wife, for I shall think of nothing else, but I've given you my solemn promise," said Mark stoutly, "and I'll keep it as sure as I live. We'll be legally married by the laws of New Hampshire, but we won't think of it as a marriage till I tell your father and mine and we drive away once more together. That time it will be in the sight of everybody, with our heads in the air. I've got the little house in Portsmouth all ready, Patty. It's small, but it's in a nice part of the town. Portsmouth is a pretty place, but it'll be a great deal prettier when it has Mrs. Mark Wilson living in it. We can be married over again in Maine afterward if your heart is set upon it. I'm willing to marry you in every state of the Union so far as I am concerned."

"I think you've been so kind and good and thoughtful, Mark, dear," said Patty, more fondly and meltingly than she had ever spoken to him before, "and so clever too. I do respect you for getting that good position in Portsmouth and being able to set up for yourself at your age. I shouldn't wonder a bit if you were a judge some day and then what a proud girl I shall be!"

Patty's praise was bestowed none too frequently, and it sounded very sweet in the young man's ears.

"I do believe I can get on with you to help me, Patty," he said, pressing her arm more closely to his side and looking down ardently into her radiant face. "You're a great deal cleverer than I am, but I have a faculty for the business of the law, so my father says, and a faculty for money making too. And even if we have to begin in a small way my salary will be a certainty, and we'll work up together. I can see you in a yellow satin dress stiff enough to stand alone!"

"It must be white satin, if you please, not yellow! After having used a hundred and ten yards of shop worn yellow calico on myself within two years I never want to wear that color again! If only I could come to you better provided," she sighed, with the suggestion of tears in her voice. "If I'd been a common servant I could have saved something from my wages to be married on. I haven't even got anything to be married in!"

"I'll get you anything you want in Portland tomorrow."

"Certainly not; I'd rather be married in rags than have you spend your money upon me beforehand!"

"Remember to have a box of your belongings packed and slipped under the shed somewhere. You can't be certain what your father will say or do when the time comes for telling him, and I want you to be ready to leave on a moment's notice."

"I will, I'll do everything you say, Mark. But are you sure that we have thought of every other way? I do so hate being underhanded. Everything depends on my keeping it secret from Waitstill, but she doesn't suspect anything yet. She thinks of me as nothing but a child still. Do you suppose Ellen would go with us just to give me a little comfort? I shouldn't miss Waitstill so much if I had Ellen, and how happy I shall be if she approves of me for a sister and thinks your mother and father will like me in time!"

"There never was a creature born into the world that wouldn't love you, Patty!"

"I don't know, look at Aunt Abby Cole," said Patty pensively. "Well, it does not seem as if a marriage that isn't good in Riverboro was really decent. How tiresome of Maine to want all those days of public notice, people must so often want to get married in a minute. If I think about anything too long I always get out of the notion."

DEMOCRATS HAVE WARM STRUGGLE

Trouble Over State Matters at Committee Meeting.

RESOLUTION CAUSES SPLIT.

Montgomery Hare of New York City Issues Challenge to the Organization Men and Asserts That Independents Are Willing to Stake Their Prospects on His Scheme.

New York, June 20. — When State Chairman William Church Osborne called the New York state Democrats together for the second session of their conference in this city there were prospects of a warm fight over the challenge issued to the Tammany supporters by Montgomery Hare, who signified the willingness of the independent wing to "go to the mat" on a single issue and let the winner take all the spoils.

Mr. Hare's proposition was to nominate two sets of candidates, one avowed supporters of Tammany and the other antagonistic to the principles of the organization. The voters, with both sets of men before them, were to take their choice, and the defeated side was to give unalloyed support to the winner. This was the proposition that caused the trouble.

The program for the session included voting on Mr. Hare's resolution along with the other resolutions previously introduced. All of these resolutions were put forward in an effort to clear up the puzzle of how the party is to get its candidates nominated and declare its platform under the badly mixed up primary law. The principal matters besides Mr. Hare's resolution before the conference when it met were:

A resolution from ex-Senator George B. Burd of Buffalo that there be a state convention after the primaries.

A resolution from ex-Judge D-Cady Herrick of Albany that a convention be held before the primaries for the adoption of a platform and the designation of candidates if it sees fit

A resolution from Eugene Lamb Richards, superintendent of banks, that this conference appoint a committee to draft a platform

A suggestion from the committee on order of business, headed by ex-Governor John A. Dix, as to whether a committee should be named to select candidates for delegates at large to the constitutional convention

Murphy Not Serious.

Mr Murphy did not take the Hare resolution seriously He nudged J Sergeant Cram, who jumped up hastily and shouted "I second it!" but Mr. Osborn failed to recognize Mr Cram, and County Clerk William F Schneider appears on the official record as the seconder of the Hare suggestion

Talk of candidates was subordinated to wrestling with the direct primary law, but the news of Colonel Roosevelt's declaration that he will not run for governor on the Progressive ticket created a lot of interest The Democrats generally believe that they would stand a better chance of winning this fall with the colonel in the race

Corporation Counsel Frank I Polk of New York city was talked of as one of the possibilities for the nomination for United States senator Mr Polk although an independent, has always been popular with the organization Democrats.

JAPAN TO PRESS LAND ISSUE.

Exclusion Legislation May Stir Up New Entanglements.

Washington June 20—Prospects for Hindu and Japanese exclusion legislation within the next month, announced Representative Baker of California were pregnant with more international entanglements

The president, Secretary Bryan and Immigration commissioner Commetti according to Baker are conferring with the Pacific coast delegation regarding exclusion legislation Baker said the house immigration committee was practically agreed to report out his Japanese exclusion bill with some minor amendments

ON A CHURCH ROOF

Two Local Men Found in a Peculiar Situation Last Night.

Last night about 11 o'clock Chief of Police McHenry was called to Trinity church, Mrs. Bender stating that there was somebody on the church roof. The chief responded to the call and after waiting a while heard voices from the church roof. He called Policeman Aidey and a search by the two officers revealed a ladder against the building

Soon after two men descended the ladder and were nabbed by the policemen. Being asked what they were doing they stated that they were after squab pigeons having their nests in the belfry. The men turned out to be two well known men of town. Promising to go to their homes they were allowed to take their liquid and wooden loads and depart.

SMALLEST MAN ENLISTS

Recruiting Station Accepts Third Hitch Soldier.

Arthur Tingle, of Osceola Mills, for six years a soldier in the United States regular army, and one of the smallest enlisted men in the regular service, could not remain away from army life after the completion of his second hitch. Mr. Tingle was discharged over a month ago. He applied for reenlistment this week at the local recruiting station. He is the smallest man ever enlisted in this city being but 5 feet 2 inches in height or two inches below the army regulation. Special permission had to be secured by Sergeant Christ Lang from the war department to enlist the applicant.

Tingle served in Troop M. Eleventh Cavalry during his two enlistments and had been promoted to the rank of sergeant at the expiration of his term. He asked for a transfer in the service and again entered as a private in the Second calvary, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt. He left Thursday night for Fort Slocum, N. Y., for his final examination and transfer to his regiment.—Altoona Times.

DAUGHTER RETURNS

Was Visiting in Clearfield County She Told Her Mother.

Through a story published in the Tribune last Saturday morning, Mrs. Margaret Bennett, the East Altoona woman who walked the streets seeking her 18-year-old daughter, who disappeared from home last Thursday evening, managed to locate the girl, Laura Bennett, and bring her home.

Claiming that she had left home for a visit with a girl friend, the aged woman's daughter informed her overjoyed parent that the had gone to Clearfield county to spend several days. While there she noticed the story in the Tribune, a copy of which was brought into the home of her friend Monday morning. She decided to return home at once.

Mrs. Bennett was greatly relieved when the girl, who is an attractive young woman, returned home Wednesday morning. She had feared that her daughter had eloped with a railroad brakeman who was said to be paying some attention to her. Since returning home, the girl declares she will not leave her mother again.—Altoona Tribune.

WILSON SEES END OF PEACE MEETING

Preparing Formal Statement to American People.

MAKE KNOWN U. S. ATTITUDE

Secretary of War Garrison Sees Much Trouble Ahead and Is Worrying Lest Huerta's Troops Attack Americans at Vera Cruz Immediately on Expiration of Armistice.

Washington, June 20.—The Wilson administration is so convinced that the peace deliberations at Niagara Falls are rapidly nearing an end that the president is said to be preparing a formal statement to the American people which will set forth the administration's attitude. This report was not denied at the White House.

The administration likewise is prepared to resume its policy of watchful waiting until the situation simmers down. Both President Wilson and Secretary Bryan are optimistic. Not so with Secretary of War Garrison, however. He foresees a forward movement of Huerta's troops in preparation for an attack on the American forces now occupying Vera Cruz. It is known that the dictator is prepared to send a force of from 17,000 to 20,000 troops against the American forces. It is feared that an attack will be made immediately on the expiration of the armistice.

Minister Naon of Argentina, member of the Niagara Falls mediation board, quietly slipped into Washington. After a conference he sent a message to the other mediators, who at once went into secret session. The contents of the message were closely guarded, and no inkling was given out.

Secretary Bryan conferred with President Wilson on the Mexican situation for more than an hour, and then talked with Justice Lamar, one of the American delegates at Niagara Falls, over the special long distance telephone wire. Later he announced that the full scheduled conference of the mediators and delegates had been postponed owing to the failure of Minister Naon to arrive at Niagara Falls on time.

Secretary Bryan also made it known that Senor Naon has been in Washington since he left Niagara Falls for his visit to Yale and Harvard, but said he did not know what brought him here. It is thought, however, that the mediator journeyed to Washington to confer with the Spanish ambassador, who is representing Huerta's government in Washington.

President Wilson will tell about what he hoped to accomplish through mediation, will fix the responsibility for the breakdown and, it is understood, will declare that the United States has no desire to intervene in Mexico and will not do so unless forced to take action by some overt act.

The statement that the president would issue such a proclamation to the country and the world is an indication that there is no hope retained in the Niagara Falls proceedings.

Stands on Statement.

President Wilson stands squarely on the statement given out at Niagara Falls by the American delegates and will accept no settlement of the Mexican problem which is not based on the principles outlined by him. This was made clear by officials after the president had a conference with Secretary Bryan.

The president has no plans for going before congress with any phase of the Mexican question, and all talk of further armed intervention is groundless at the present time, according to officials in close touch with the situation. The same, they say, may be said of reports that the United States plans to recognize General Carranza, General Villa or any other faction in Mexico.

APOLOGIES IN WRECK INQUIRY

Lawyer Denies He Inferred Attempt to Spirit Away Witness.

Quebec, June 20.—The Empress of Ireland wreck inquiry opened with explanations and apologies by C. S. Haight, of counsel for the owners of the collier Storstad, which sank the liner, who said that he had not meant to imply that the Canadian-Pacific railway, owner of the Empress, had tried to spirit witnesses away.

This was the impression made by Mr. Haight when he placed on the stand James Galway, a quartermaster of the Empress of Ireland, who testified that the ship's steering gear was defective. Galway had told him, he said, that he was about to be sent to England.

MUNICIPAL HOME RULE

League Will Demand Right of Self-Government for Towns.

The Municipal Home Rule league was formed at Harrisburg this week by representatives of 54 municipalities and resolutions adopted against certain portions of the public service company law giving the public service commission control over utilities in municipalities. Plans were also made to start an agitation for the repeal of these sections, which it is contended take from municipalities the right to contract with public service companies within their borders and interfere with competition.

David L. Starr, of Bellevue, Allegheny county, was elected chairman; George F. P. Langfitt, of the same borough, secretary, and R. A. Holmes Lanaford, treasurer. The speakers included John W. West, Avalon, Allegheny county; Ira W. Stratton, Reading; W. R. Peoples, Jersey Shore Harry Calhoun, New Brighton; R. A. McCullough, Kittanning; William W. Hall, Pittston; Horace W. Davis, Sharon, and W. L. Pace, Wilkes-Barre

Arrangements were made to raise a fund of $5000, and for committees on finance, legislation and campaign. It was stated that letters from 100 municipalities, not represented, but pledging support had been received.

SETTLE MINERS STRIKE

Men in Kanawha Coal Fields Agree to Resume Work.

An agreement that will end the strike of about 5000 men in the Kanawha coal fields of West Virginia, was reached Thursday when representatives of the operators and mine workers accepted propositions offered the conciliators appointed by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

The principal demand of the men was for the adoption of the "ckeck-off" system, by which their union dues will be deducted from their pay envelopes each month by the companies and to this the representatives of the Kanawha Coal Operators' association agreed, with the understanding that not more than $1.10 is to be taken from each man's envelope per month.

LEWIS AND PINCHOT WILL JOIN FORCES

Two Washington Candidates Will Tour State Together

Philadelphia, June 20:—William Draper Lewis, Washington party candidate for governor, announced here Friday that he would formally open his campaign by accompanying Gifford Pinchot on his tour of the northeastern section of the state next week Pinchot and Lewis will visit Bradford, Wayne and Susquehanna counties.

They will travel by automobile, making addresses at the principal towns and ending with night meetings in the larger centers.

The tour will start June 25 and continue for three days. June 29 both candidates will go to Pittsburg, where they will meet Col. Roosevelt and other Progressives at the second Progressive conference in this state.

Lewis intends to spend the summer campaigning through the state and will aim to speak in every county seat.

During July and part of August Pinchot expects to visit the coal fields and the western part of the state. A. Nevin Detrich, state chairman of the Washington party, is at present in the north-eastern counties arranging for the Pinchot-Lewis tour.

Washington party candidates in the various sections visited will join Pinchot and Lewis and accompany them through the districts.

LOCK HAVEN NORMAL

Local Students Who Passed the State Examination.

Among the senior and junior students of the state normal school at Lock Haven who successfully passed the state board examinations this week were the following from this county:

Seniors—Leland Edinger, Luthersburg; Mary Gallagher, Curwensville.

Juniors—Mabel Albert, Woodland; Zoe Lines, Luthersburg; Bess Moore DuBois; Patricia Murphy, DuBois; Alta Rowles, Clearfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Miller, son George and daughters Nancy and Julia, returned from Northumberland, where they had been visiting, last evening.

VICTORY EXULTS SUFFRAGETTES

Rejoicing Follows Announcement of Conference.

ASQUITH TO MEET FURIES.

Sylvia Pankhurst's Starving on Steps of Parliament Forces Him to Receive Delegation — Arsonette Squad Fires Another Church—First Victory For the Wild Women.

London, June 20.—Although in a state of collapse, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst began the selection of the east side working women who will have audience with Premier Asquith. Elation from the premier's capitulation was not sufficient to offset the weakness caused by her eight days' hunger strike and her trip to the house of commons after her release from jail.

While the suffragettes were exulting at their victory, hailed as a big step toward votes for women, an attempt to burn a church at Beckenham, a suburb of London, was made by an "arson squad" of militant suffragettes.

The flames were extinguished. The damage done was very small.

The government is attempting to take the sting out of the victory of Miss Pankhurst, but the feeling is general that the surrender is complete. Miss Pankhurst was arrested for attempting to lead a delegation such as will be heard and declared she would remain on hunger strike until audience was granted.

Liberals Offer Excuses.

The fact that she kept her promise overshadows the statement issued by the chief Liberal whip that the audience had been agreed to hours before she was released from jail.

The fact is prominent in the public mind that the announcement of the audience was not made until Miss Pankhurst had taken her place, propped up with pillows, on the steps of the house of parliament.

She lay on the steps fully ten minutes before the announcement was made that the premier would receive a delegation of east side working women. Then she was taken to her home and suffered a severe relapse.

The surrender of Asquith has caused a great change in the feeling toward suffragettes. The demonstration which started when Miss Pankhurst was driven away from the commons continued to greet all suffragette speakers during the evening.

Numerous speakers were shown more respect than ever before all over London.

NEW CATHEDRAL

Local Masons Take Part in Dedication of Fine Building.

The new Masonic cathedral at Coudersport, Potter county, was dedicated this week, a large number of prominent Masons from all over the state being present to witness the ceremonies. It was also the occasion of the 31st reunion of the Ancient Accepted Scottish rite body. The following Masons are mentioned among those on the visitation and relief committee: Prof. George E. Zerfoss, of Clearfield; Daniel Pratt, DuBois. Prof Zerfoss was a former resident of Coudersport. E. T. Henry, of Clearfield, was given a degree at the session of the lodge.

The new cathedral is a handsome structure.

EARLY MORNING WEDDING

Italian Young People Married in St. Francis Church.

Carmelo Barba and Anna Cardinale were married at Nuptial Mass, in the St. Francis church, at 7.30 this morning. The ceremony was performed by Father Ryan. They were attended by Frank Crasain and Venzuela Barba.

The beautiful bride was attired in a satin gown and wore a vil of silk chiffon. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Won First Prize.

Michael Minehan returned yesterday from St. Bonaventure college, in Allegheny, N. Y. He carried off first prize in English versification, receiving $15 in gold and was distinguished in five of his classes. He graduated from St. Francis High school in 1912.

BROTHERHOODS FRATERNIZE

Clearfield Body Pays a Visit to Curwensville Organization

MOST DELIGHTFUL OCCASION

The Men Enjoy Short Speeches, Listen to Vocal and Instrumental Music, Partake of Fine Refreshments and Vote the Meeting Best They Have Yet Held.

Friday evening almost one hundred men from Clearfield Brotherhoods went to Curwensville to visit the Brotherhood there. The men left on the B., R. & P. train which leaves Clearfield shortly after 7 o'clock, and returned on a special train leaving Curwensville at 11.00 P. M.

The affair marks a milestone in the history of the two organizations, and was characterized by one speaker, who has been 46 years a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as the most remarkable gathering of this kind he had ever seen. Many of the town's most influential business and professional men were members of the visiting party, and at Curwensville the men of all churches welcomed the visitors.

An Imposing Procession.

Arriving at Curwensville, the Clearfield men, led by the Keystone band, marched through town, followed by the men of the Curwensville Brotherhood. The exercises were held in the Methodist Episcopal church, beginning at 8.00 o'clock. The large auditorium was almost filled with men, several ministers of the two towns being present.

Following an organ prelude and singing by the congregation, the Rev. Dr. Bender, of Trinity, made the invocation. This was followed by a selection from the orchestra.

The address of welcome was made by T. G. Shelow, president of the Curwensville Brotherhood. Mr. Shelow told of what constitutes a real man and extended to the visitors a cordial welcome. The response was made by William T. Boyce, who introduced A. G. Woodward, Esq. Mr. Woodward made a characteristically able address, referring to the responsibilities as well as the advantages in being banded together in a Brotherhood.

Several Speeches.

The Curwensville quartet rendered a selection, after which Joseph E. Phillips spoke of "Our Brotherhood," telling about the workings of the Clearfield organization. John A. Dale, speaking for the Curwensville organization, made an excellent address. This was followed by two selections from the Clearfield quartet.

The men then went to the church basement, where an elaborate spread of good things was served. As a climax to a splendid program, the feast left little to be desired. Each person was provided with a tray bearing sandwiches, pickles and coffee, after which liberal helpings of ice cream, the dishes heaped high with strawberries, and cake of every good variety, that eloquently attested to the culinary abilities of the Curwensville ladies, completed the repast.

The speechmaking was limited, as the hour of departure was drawing near when the banquet was brought to a close and the Clearfield quartet, assisted by Ellis Schomo, rendered a selection. A. G. Woodward, of Curwensville, was toastmaster and called upon Harry B. Powell, of Clearfield, C. S. Russell, of Curwensville, Hon. Frank G. Harris, Rev. E. V. Brown, Rev. B. A. Salter and Dr. Bender.

An Enjoyable Affair.

In introducing Mr. Harris, reference was made to his travels, Mr. Woodward recently having heard an address by Mr. Harris on his trip to the Holy Land. Mr. Harris regretted his inability to present anything worthy of the occasion in the few minutes allotted to him, and upon motion of Rev. Lantz, Mr. Harris was extended an invitation to give an address to the Brotherhood at their meeting on Sunday, June 28, at 3.00 o'clock. The motion was adopted by a rising vote, Mr. Harris accepting the invitation.

Dr. Bender was introduced by Rev. Lantz and made the hit of the evening by explaining the peculiarities of an "Italian" watch, after which the men adjourned to the train.

Altogether, the affair was one of the most enjoyable ever participated in by the men of Clearfield.

ANCIENT COUNTRIES WILL BE VISITED

Miss Sarah Cummings Will Take Second Voyage Abroad

Miss Sara Cummings will sail for Europe, June 24, upon the S. S. Oceania, Austro-American, with the Syracuse University party, originated and personally directed by Alexander Clarence Flick, Litt D. Ph. D., professor of European history at the Syracuse university. They will land in Patras, Greece, July 10.

They will spend several days in Greece, visiting Delphi, the religious center of ancient Greece, Olympia, Cornith, Mycanai, Nauphi aandAthens the cultural center of the ancient world. From there they will sail for Alexandria.

While in Egypt Miss Cummings will visit Cairo, Memphis, Heliopolis, Old Cairo, the Sphinx, the Pyramids, mosques, the Petrified Forest and the museums.

A special trip up the Nile to Luxor and Karnak will be arranged. She will visit the beautiful valley of the Nile during the season when the inundation is taking place, when the water slowly rises until it reaches the same heights which it has been attaining for ages; in three months, then slowly starts to fall again. The party will return to New York September 2.

Miss Cummings is a teacher of rarest ability and genius. Her pupils accomplish more work than any others in the school, and they do it because they love to. They study history and learn its real value; that it is not a dry data of facts, but a narration of real things done by real live people, who lived, walked and talked as we do, and of their significance to us.

Miss Cummings is that most ideal of all women, a spiritual mother. She takes a deep personal interest and love in the boys and girls who come to her. She leads them to build ideals of purer, grander lives than they have ever dreamed of before. She instills in the hearts of all who know her the love of their fellow men and the value of being a leader, not a mere follower in the mass. This is her second trip to Europe. On the former trip, made in 1910, she visited England, France, Switzerland, Italy and Greece, returning by the way of Quebec, Canada.

He Paid the Bill.

A horse belonging to Rev. A. L. Frank, of Mahaffey, got out of the stable Monday night and entered a cornfield belonging to Constable Redden, of that place. The constable charged that the animal had done $4 worth of damages to his corn, and the minister settled.

Graduated from Bucknell.

Miss Mildred Ruth Kirk, of Clearfield graduated from the Bucknell university as an A. B., at the commencement this week.

BROUGHT [illegible] TO THE [illegible]

Members of W. C. T. U. [illegible] County Home Friday

FLOWERS AND FRUIT [illegible]

Family of Unfortunates Made Happy by Kindness of [illegible] Song Delight Them—Rev. [illegible] Delivers a Temperance Talk—Very Pleasing Custom.

The W. C. T. U. of Clearfield observed the anniversary of [illegible] day of Miss Jennie Cassiday [illegible] by making it cheer up day for [illegible] mates of the County Home. Miss Jennie Cassiday was 35 years [illegible] lid and confined to her bed in [illegible] ville, Kentucky, and worked [illegible] idea of sending bouquets of [illegible] with a text from the Bible [illegible] to them, to all invalids. Miss [illegible] Willard met her and appointed [illegible] superintendent of Flower Mission. Since her death the W. C. T. U. [illegible] brates her birthday by making [illegible] upon that day people less fortunate than others.

Twenty-seven of the members of the Clearfield W. C. T. U. went on the 1.15 train and spent the afternoon at the home. A very delightful program was given in the chapel and the joy in the faces of the unfortunates gathered there showed how greatly they appreciated the efforts made to entertain them.

A Pleasant Occasion.

All joined in the singing of the opening hymn, then Rev. B. A. Salter led in prayer. This was followed by a few very impressive words by Mrs. G. Bouton, and some of the men and women told how glad they were to have W. C. T. U. day come and how they looked forward to it each year.

Miss Frances Haichbold read in a very pleasing and taking manner eight or nine amusing poems and was heartily applauded by the audience. She ended by giving a poem of her own composition, "Miss Maggie goes to the Picture Show," which brought a hearty laugh from all.

A Temperance Talk.

After two more songs in which the inmates joined enthusiastically, Miss Salter addressed the inmates. She said:

"I was greatly surprised when I first learned that the work of ridding the land of the liquor traffic was one all that the W. C. T. U. undertook, as I had though that was a great enough work in itself, but I learned that the union carry the gospel to the jails, cheer the lonely and forsaken and do what-so-ever they can find that needs doing.

"To refuse license is not to refuse personal liberty or personal privilege, because no man liveth unto himself. 'Am I my brother's keeper?' is a question that has come down to us through the ages. Every man is his brother's keeper. We cannot live and not influence others. Every man lives for another.

"In a town in which I once lived 16 out of 17 licenses were refused and the town improved because of it. The money that formerly went for liquor now buys shoes.

"With God's help any man can give up the drink habit. There is no man living who does not love his children well enough to give liquor up, if he only has faith enough to do so. I hope that each of you here will be a strong advocate for state-wide prohibition and do all that you can to help the cause."

Miss Laura Hoyt sang a delightful solo and it was very appreciatively received by the audience. It was easy to see that she was a favorite at the home.

Gifts for the Inmates.

Mrs. Carrie Smith and Miss Laura Hoyt then sang a beautiful duet, while the ladies distributed flowers, magazines, fruit and candy to each of the 139 inmates. The beautiful roses brought great joy to the poor, unfortunates, who carried them around and disposed of them in whatever way they could most cherish them. Especially in the hospital wards they brought great cheer and almost pathetic gratitude into the faces of the recipents.

The ladies returned upon the six o'clock train. The County Home offers a wonderful opportunity for people with spare time to use in giving pleasure to others. These people, human beings, less fortunate than others, certainly appreciate all efforts to make life more pleasant for them.

WHAT?

What has become of the man who never saw a cooler summer than the present one?

Good evening! Remember the Lord's day and keep it wholly free from joy rides and other abominations.

THE JUNE BRIDE.

Always the June bride regards herself as more fortunate than the bride of any other month of the year. To be married in June is the ambition of most girls, but unfortunately all of them cannot carry out their plans. But there are more marriages in June than in any other month, and the June bride always looks as happy as she feels. She has a right to all the happiness that comes her way, for winter is coming and the frosts will be on the pumpkin and the honeymoon.

A girl ought to begin thinking of her June wedding about the first of July of the previous year. That is, the young girl who does not profit by the experience of her female friends. It might be possible for a young girl who thinks of rushing into matrimony before she has learned to do up her own hair to escape matrimonial troubles if she were to begin dreaming of a June wedding when she is sixteen and keep on dreaming til she is old enough to distinguish between a meat chopper and a nutmeg grater.

The divorce courts are kept busy with cases in which the principals married while they were entirely too young, before they had gained that intelligens which warns human beings not to rush in where angels fear to tread. Children who marry without knowing what they are doing find the matrimonial highways strewn with all kinds of trouble, whether they were married in June or any other month. But here's hoping that the June brides of this year will all prove to their own satisfaction that matrimony is the only road to happiness.

THE INDUSTRIAL PARADE.

Undoubtedly the industrial parade which will form part of the two-day celebration of the Fourth of July in Clearfield will be a success, whatever may happen to other features of the event. The committee which has the industrial parade in charge has already enlisted the interest and cooperation of a large number of manufacturers and business men in the forthcoming pageant, and within a week it is expected that the list of those who will be represented in the parade by floats and wagons will contain the name of every manufacturer and business man in Clearfield.

Having taken up this project it would be a serious reflection upon the enterprise of the business men of the town if they were not to put forth every effort to make the industrial parade the success it is expected to be. The floats should not only be numerous, but they should be truly representative of the progressiveness of the citizens of the town. There will be many strangers in Clearfield on the Fourth, and these should be given an opportunity to see and judge of the town's enterprise through the floats in the industrial parade.

If GeneralFunston's troops shall be massacred by Mexicans while Bryan's mediators are drinking champagne in Niagara Falls there will be a day of reckoning for the secretary of state.

He who never says anything never makes any mistakes in his speech, but such a man is about as useful as a comb to bald headed man.

It has been so long since it rained in this section that the people are to be excused for being without an umbrella when it is wet.

Stand up for your town, even if you are knocked down for it.

Join in the industrial parade on the Fourth.

GOLDEN EAGLE NIGHT AT BIG TABERNACLE

Evangelist Johnson Preaches Strong Sermons

Osceola Mills, June 20.

Golden Eagle night was a grand success in Osceola Mills Thursday night. The largest crowd that has yet attended the meetings filled the large tabernacle, and people were standing outside. A special train brought the visiting lodge of Eagles to Osceola, where, led by the Osceola band, they marched around town and then to the tabernacle, where seats had been reserved. About 175 men represented the Golden Eagles.

The opening service of praise was greatly enjoyed by every one. The large chorus choir sang several numbers, which were greatly appreciated. The "Cross Key's" Glee club sang two numbers. Every one was very glad to hear these gentlemen and eagerly await their return. Richard Blankley, a former Osceola resident sang the "Holy City." No one that heard Mr. Blankley but felt better for it. Mr. Mainwaring played for the second time "The Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore." Mr. Mainwaring certainly holds his audience from the time he starts until the "Finale."

Mr. Johnson then read the announcements for the remainder of the week. Then, after a plea for God's guidance, he announced his subject, "The Importance of Working for Jesus Christ." In that magnificent idea for Christian people to go out and do their full duty he made his audience feel their first duty was to work for Christ. "The first thing you need in working for Christ is the Word of God. I would prefer to go without the Faith if I had the Word of God as my guide. Another thing we need is Faith in God's promises. God has promised to save a man, no matter how wicked he may be A third thing we need in working for Jesus is to have courage even if you think that some one will laugh at you have the courage to do right. For I say this to night, and never forget it that a man can laugh you into hell, but he can never laugh you out of hell If you forget every thing else that I say tonight, do not forget that. If we do our duty, God never tells us to go any place but Jesus goes before us, and very often prepares the way God will always go with you when He calls you to go some place for Him When we go in the name of the Lord our God He will go with us and help us It is God that must work through us, not we ourselves God is looking for Gideonites in Osceola Mills He is looking for men and women who will not blow retreat

"It is an awful thing for a soul to go out of this world without God and without hope. May God help us tonight and get hold of our hearts that we may make up our minds that we will go anywhere and try to win precious ones to Christ God help us to go out to slay the lion of sin."

The meeting was closed by everyone standing and singing that splendid old hymn, "Stand Up For Jesus."

Mr. Johnson will speak to men only Sunday afternoon at 3 P. M subject, "Men's Sins, Diseases and Habits." Mrs. Johnson will address the women at the Presbyterian church at the same hour.

Author of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm"

Meantime Feeble Phoebe Day was driving her father's horse up to the hills to bring Cephas Cole home. It was a thrilling moment, a sort of outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual tie, for their banns were to be published the next day.

It had been an eventful autumn for Cephas. After a third request for the hand of Miss Patience Baxter and a refusal of even more than common decision and energy, Cephas turned about face and employed the entire month of September in a determined assault upon the affections of Miss Lucy Morrill, but with no better avail.

Cephas' belief in the holy state of matrimony as being the only one proper for a man really ought to have commended him to the opposite (and unfaithful) sex more than it did, and Lucy Morrill held as respectful an opinion of the institution and its manifold advantages as Cephas himself, but she was in a very unsettled frame of mind and not at all susceptible to wooing. She had a strong preference for Philip Perry and held an opinion, not altogether unfounded in human experience, that in course of time, when quite deserted by Patty Baxter, his heart might possibly be caught on the rebound. It was only a chance, but Lucy would almost have preferred remaining unmarried even to the withering age of twenty-five rather than not be at liberty to accept Philip Perry in case she should be asked.

Cephas, therefore, by the middle of October could be picturesquely and alliteratively described as being raw from repeated rejections. His bruised heart and his despised oil literally cried out for the appreciation so long and blindly withheld. Now all at once Phoebe disclosed a second virtue, her first and only one hitherto in the eyes of Cephas having been an ability to get on with his mother—a feat in which many had made an effort and few indeed had succeeded. Phoebe, it seems, had always secretly admired, respected and loved Cephas Cole. Never since her pale and somewhat glassy blue eye had opened on life had she beheld a being she could so adore if encouraged in the attitude.

The moment this unusual and unexpected poultice was really applied to Cephas' wounds they began to heal. In the course of a month the most ordinary observer could have perceived a physical change in him. He cringed no more, but held his head higher; his back straightened; his voice developed a gruff, assertive note like that of a stern Roman father; he let his mustache grow and sometimes, in his most reckless moments, twiddled the end of it.

And then congratulations began to pour in. Was ever marriage so fortuitous? The Co'es' farm joined that of the Days', and the union between the two only children would cement the friendship between the families. The fact that Uncle Bart was a joiner, Cephas a painter and Abel Day a mason and bricklayer made the alliance almost providential in its business opportunities. Phoebe's Massachusetts aunt sent a complete outfit of gilt edged china, a clock and a mahogany chamber set. Aunt Abby relinquished to the young couple a bedroom and a spare chamber in the "main part," while the Days supplied live geese feathers and table and bed linen with positive prodigality. Aunt Abby trod the air like one inspired.

"If only I could 'a' looked ahead," smiled Uncle Bart quizzically to himself, "I'd 'a' had thirteen sons and daughters an' married off one of 'em every year. That would 'a' made Abby's good temper kind o' permanent."

Cephas was content too. There was a good deal in being settled and having "the whole doggoned business" off your hands. Phoebe looked a very different creature to him in these latter days. Her eyes were just as pale, of course, but they were brighter, and they radiated love for him, an expression in the female eye that he had thus far been singularly unfortunate in securing. She still held her mouth slightly open, but Cephas thought that it might be permissible, perhaps after three months of wedded bliss, to request her to be more careful in closing it.

Cephas did not think of Patty any longer with bitterness in these days, being of the opinion that she was punished enough in observing his own growing popularity and prosperity.

"If she should see that mahogany chamber set going into the ell I guess she'll be glad enough to change her mind," thought Cephas exultingly, and then there suddenly shot through his mind the passing fancy, "I wonder if she would!" He promptly banished the infamous suggestion, however, reenforcing his virtue with the reflection that the chamber set was Phoebe's anyway, and the marriage day appointed and the invitations given out and the wedding cake being baked, a loaf at a time, by his mother and Mrs. Day.

As a matter of fact, Patty would have had no eyes for Phoebe's magnificent mahogany, even had the cart that carried it passed her on the hill where she and Mark Wilson were walking. Her promise to marry him was a few weeks old now, and his arm encircled her slender waist under the brown homespun cape. That in itself was a new sensation and gave her the delicious sense of belonging to somebody who valued her highly and assured her of his sentiments clearly and frequently, both by word and deed. Life, dull gray life, was going to change its hue for her presently, and not long after, she hoped, for Waitstill too.

The "publishing" of Cephas and his third choice, their dull walk up the aisle of the meeting house before an admiring throng on the Sunday when Phoebe would "appear bride," all this seemed very tame as compared with the dreams of this ardent and adventurous pair of lovers who had gone about for days harboring secrets greater and more daring, they thought, than had ever been breathed before within the hearing of Saco water.

CHAPTER XXI.

Love's Young Dream.

It was not an afternoon for day dreams, for there was a chill in the air and a gray sky. Only a week before the hills along the river might have been the walls of the New Jerusalem, shining like red gold. Now the glory had departed, and it was a naked world, with empty nests hanging to boughs that not long ago had been green with summer.

Young love thought little of nature's miracles, and hearts that beat high and fast were warm enough to forget the bleak wind and gathering clouds. If there were naked trees were there not full barrels of apples in every cellar? If there was nothing but stubble in the frozen fields, why there was plenty of wheat and corn at the mill all ready for grinding. The cold air made one long for a cheery home and fireside, the crackle of a hearth log, the bubbling of a steaming kettle, and Patty and Mark clung together as they walked along, making bright images of a life together, snug, warm and happy.

Patty was a capricious creature, but all her changes were sudden and endearing ones, captivating those who loved her more than a monotonous and unchanging virtue. Any little shower with Patty always ended with a rainbow, that made the landscape more enchanting than before. Of late her little coquetries and petulances had disappeared as if by magic. She had been melted somehow from irresponsible girlhood into womanhood and that, too, by the ardent affection of a very ordinary young man who had no great gift save that of loving Patty greatly. The love had served its purpose in another way, too, for under its influence Mark's own manhood had broadened and deepened. He longed to bind Patty to him for good and all, to capture the bright bird whose fluttering wings and burnished plumage so captured his senses and stirred his heart, but his longings had changed with the quality of his love, and he glowed at the thought of delivering the girl from her dreary surroundings and giving her the tenderness, the ease and comfort, the innocent gayety, that her nature craved.

"You won't fail me, Patty darling?" he was saying at this moment. "Now that our plans are finally made, with never a weak point anywhere as far as I can see, my heart is so set upon carrying them out that every hour of waiting seems an age!"

"No, I won't fail, Mark, but I never know the day that father will go to town until the night before. I can always hear him making his preparations in the barn and the shed, and ordering Waitstill here and there. He is as excited as if he was going to Boston instead of Milltown."

"The night before will do. I will watch the house every evening till you hang a white signal from your window."

"It won't be white," said Patty, who would be mischievous on her deathbed. "My Sunday go-to-meetin' petticoat is too grand, and everything else that we have is yellow."

"I shall see it, whatever color it is you can be sure of that!" said Mark gallantly. "Then it's decided that next morning I'll wait at the tavern from sunrise, and whenever your father and Waitstill have driven up Saco hill I'll come and pick you up, and we'll be off like a streak of lightning across the hills to New Hampshire. How lucky that Riverboro is only thirty miles from the state line! It looks like snow, and how I wish it would be something more than a flurry, a regular whizzing, whirring storm that would pack the roads and let us slip over them with our sleigh bells ringing!"

"I should like that, for they would be our only wedding bells. Oh, Mark! What if Waitstill shouldn't go, after all, though I heard father tell her that he needed her to buy things for the store, and that they wouldn't be back till after nightfall. Just to think of being married without Waitstill!"

"You can do without Waitstill on this one occasion, better than you can without me," laughed Mark, pinching Patty's cheek. "I've given the town clerk due notice and I have a friend to meet me at his office. He is going to lend me his horse for the drive home, and we shall change back the next week. That will give us a fresh horse each way and we'll fly like the wind, snow or no snow. When we come down Guide Board hill that night, Patty, we shall be man and wife; isn't that wonderful?"

"We shall be man and wife in New Hampshire, but not in Maine, you say," Patty reminded him dolefully. "It does seem dreadful that we can't be married in our own state and have to go dangling about with this secret on our minds day and night, but it can't be helped. You'll try not to even think of me as your wife till we go to Portsmouth to live, won't you?"

"You're asking too much when you say I'll not to think of you as my wife, for I shall think of nothing else, but I've given you my solemn promise," said Mark stoutly, "and I'll keep it as sure as I live. We'll be legally married by the laws of New Hampshire, but we won't think of it as a marriage till I tell your father and mine and we drive away once more together. That time it will be in the sight of everybody, with our heads in the air. I've got the little house in Portsmouth all ready, Patty. It's small, but it's in a nice part of the town. Portsmouth is a pretty place, but it'll be a great deal prettier when it has Mrs. Mark Wilson living in it. We can be married over again in Maine afterward if your heart is set upon it. I'm willing to marry you in every state of the Union so far as I am concerned."

"I think you've been so kind and good and thoughtful, Mark, dear," said Patty, more fondly and meltingly than she had ever spoken to him before, "and so clever too. I do respect you for getting that good position in Portsmouth and being able to set up for yourself at your age. I shouldn't wonder a bit if you were a judge some day and then what a proud girl I shall be!"

Patty's praise was bestowed none too frequently, and it sounded very sweet in the young man's ears.

"I do believe I can get on with you to help me, Patty," he said, pressing her arm more closely to his side and looking down ardently into her radiant face. "You're a great deal cleverer than I am, but I have a faculty for the business of the law, so my father says, and a faculty for money making too. And even if we have to begin in a small way my salary will be a certainty, and we'll work up together. I can see you in a yellow satin dress stiff enough to stand alone!"

"It must be white satin, if you please, not yellow! After having used a hundred and ten yards of shop worn yellow calico on myself within two years I never want to wear that color again! If only I could come to you better provided," she sighed, with the suggestion of tears in her voice. "If I'd been a common servant I could have saved something from my wages to be married on. I haven't even got anything to be married in!"

"I'll get you anything you want in Portland tomorrow."

"Certainly not; I'd rather be married in rags than have you spend your money upon me beforehand!"

"Remember to have a box of your belongings packed and slipped under the shed somewhere. You can't be certain what your father will say or do when the time comes for telling him, and I want you to be ready to leave on a moment's notice."

"I will, I'll do everything you say, Mark. But are you sure that we have thought of every other way? I do so hate being underhanded. Everything depends on my keeping it secret from Waitstill, but she doesn't suspect anything yet. She thinks of me as nothing but a child still. Do you suppose Ellen would go with us just to give me a little comfort? I shouldn't miss Waitstill so much if I had Ellen, and how happy I shall be if she approves of me for a sister and thinks your mother and father will like me in time!"

"There never was a creature born into the world that wouldn't love you, Patty!"

"I don't know, look at Aunt Abby Cole," said Patty pensively. "Well, it does not seem as if a marriage that isn't good in Riverboro was really decent. How tiresome of Maine to want all those days of public notice, people must so often want to get married in a minute. If I think about anything too long I always get out of the notion."

DEMOCRATS HAVE WARM STRUGGLE

Trouble Over State Matters at Committee Meeting.

RESOLUTION CAUSES SPLIT.

Montgomery Hare of New York City Issues Challenge to the Organization Men and Asserts That Independents Are Willing to Stake Their Prospects on His Scheme.

New York, June 20. — When State Chairman William Church Osborne called the New York state Democrats together for the second session of their conference in this city there were prospects of a warm fight over the challenge issued to the Tammany supporters by Montgomery Hare, who signified the willingness of the independent wing to "go to the mat" on a single issue and let the winner take all the spoils.

Mr. Hare's proposition was to nominate two sets of candidates, one avowed supporters of Tammany and the other antagonistic to the principles of the organization. The voters, with both sets of men before them, were to take their choice, and the defeated side was to give unalloyed support to the winner. This was the proposition that caused the trouble.

The program for the session included voting on Mr. Hare's resolution along with the other resolutions previously introduced. All of these resolutions were put forward in an effort to clear up the puzzle of how the party is to get its candidates nominated and declare its platform under the badly mixed up primary law. The principal matters besides Mr. Hare's resolution before the conference when it met were:

A resolution from ex-Senator George B. Burd of Buffalo that there be a state convention after the primaries.

A resolution from ex-Judge D-Cady Herrick of Albany that a convention be held before the primaries for the adoption of a platform and the designation of candidates if it sees fit

A resolution from Eugene Lamb Richards, superintendent of banks, that this conference appoint a committee to draft a platform

A suggestion from the committee on order of business, headed by ex-Governor John A. Dix, as to whether a committee should be named to select candidates for delegates at large to the constitutional convention

Murphy Not Serious.

Mr Murphy did not take the Hare resolution seriously He nudged J Sergeant Cram, who jumped up hastily and shouted "I second it!" but Mr. Osborn failed to recognize Mr Cram, and County Clerk William F Schneider appears on the official record as the seconder of the Hare suggestion

Talk of candidates was subordinated to wrestling with the direct primary law, but the news of Colonel Roosevelt's declaration that he will not run for governor on the Progressive ticket created a lot of interest The Democrats generally believe that they would stand a better chance of winning this fall with the colonel in the race

Corporation Counsel Frank I Polk of New York city was talked of as one of the possibilities for the nomination for United States senator Mr Polk although an independent, has always been popular with the organization Democrats.

JAPAN TO PRESS LAND ISSUE.

Exclusion Legislation May Stir Up New Entanglements.

Washington June 20—Prospects for Hindu and Japanese exclusion legislation within the next month, announced Representative Baker of California were pregnant with more international entanglements

The president, Secretary Bryan and Immigration commissioner Commetti according to Baker are conferring with the Pacific coast delegation regarding exclusion legislation Baker said the house immigration committee was practically agreed to report out his Hindu exclusion bill with some minor amendments

Two Local Men Found in a Peculiar Situation Last Night.

Last night about 11 o'clock Chief of Police McHenry was called to Trinity church, Mrs. Bender stating that there was somebody on the church roof. The chief responded to the call and after waiting a while heard voices from the church roof. He called Policeman Aidey and a search by the two officers revealed a ladder against the building

Soon after two men descended the ladder and were nabbed by the policemen. Being asked what they were doing they stated that they were after squab pigeons having their nests in the belfry. The men turned out to be two well known men of town. Promising to go to their homes they were allowed to take their liquid and wooden loads and depart.

SMALLEST MAN ENLISTS

Recruiting Station Accepts Third Hitch Soldier.

Arthur Tingle, of Osceola Mills, for six years a soldier in the United States regular army, and one of the smallest enlisted men in the regular service, could not remain away from army life after the completion of his second hitch. Mr. Tingle was discharged over a month ago. He applied for reenlistment this week at the local recruiting station. He is the smallest man ever enlisted in this city being but 5 feet 2 inches in height or two inches below the army regulation. Special permission had to be secured by Sergeant Christ Lang from the war department to enlist the applicant.

Tingle served in Troop M. Eleventh Cavalry during his two enlistments and had been promoted to the rank of sergeant at the expiration of his term. He asked for a transfer in the service and again entered as a private in the Second calvary, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt. He left Thursday night for Fort Slocum, N. Y., for his final examination and transfer to his regiment.—Altoona Times.

DAUGHTER RETURNS

Was Visiting in Clearfield County She Told Her Mother.

Through a story published in the Tribune last Saturday morning, Mrs. Margaret Bennett, the East Altoona woman who walked the streets seeking her 18-year-old daughter, who disappeared from home last Thursday evening, managed to locate the girl, Laura Bennett, and bring her home.

Claiming that she had left home for a visit with a girl friend, the aged woman's daughter informed her overjoyed parent that the had gone to Clearfield county to spend several days. While there she noticed the story in the Tribune, a copy of which was brought into the home of her friend Monday morning. She decided to return home at once.

Mrs. Bennett was greatly relieved when the girl, who is an attractive young woman, returned home Wednesday morning. She had feared that her daughter had eloped with a railroad brakeman who was said to be paying some attention to her. Since returning home, the girl declares she will not leave her mother again.—Altoona Tribune.
